FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

George C. Franklin Award Presented to Municipal and County Administration Graduate from Town of Kitty Hawk

CHAPEL HILL, NC – Joe Heard, director of planning and inspections for the Town of Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, was named winner of the George C. Franklin Award during the April 23 graduation ceremony for the 2008–2009 Municipal and County Administration Course of the School of Government at UNC-Chapel Hill. The North Carolina League of Municipalities presents the award each year to the class member with the most distinguished record; the award is given in honor of the League’s former general counsel, George C. Franklin.

The Municipal and County Administration Course is an intensive, eight-month program designed for city and county managers, department heads, and other city or county officials whose responsibilities require an understanding of functions beyond individual areas of specialization. Major areas of instruction include local government law, organization and management, finance and budgeting, public employment law, planning and regulation development, and municipal and county services. Participants are provided with a legal framework and practical application in these areas through lecture, case studies, and group work. The goal of the course is for participants to gain a better appreciation and understanding of the relationship among the broad range of departments that make up local governments.

In addressing the graduates, Mike Smith, dean of the School of Government, said, “If there was ever a time when local governments need to be ‘on their game,’ this is it. I hope that, after completing this rigorous course of study, you feel better prepared to help your communities with the many challenges facing our state today.”

Heard was one of 65 officials who graduated from the Municipal Administration Course in 2009 and is one of more than 2,600 officials who have completed the course since it began in 1954.
