FULL SEMESTER ELECTIVE COURSES (3 CREDIT HOURS)

PUBA 722	ADMIN POLITICS	M. Hoyman	0500 – 0750 pm, M	99413	KN 3104
This course is an overview of characteristics of federal level policy making, with a particular focus on the executive branch. One section contains some policy process theory- how ideas come to arrive on the political agenda and one section deals with whether bureaucratic reforms are doomed to failure. We also examine policy formation and policy execution in several substantive areas of policy such as health care, including Medicare, welfare reform, social security and disaster management. We use several experiential exercises such as a congressional simulation of the post-Katrina hearings and a case study to gain insight into how the different institutional actors and their incentives operate on the federal level in policy-making.
