INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill INTRODUCTION

This chart is the Institute of Government's fifth compilation based on an earlier chart originally called Summary of Crimes Most Frequently Committed by Punishment, Grade, and Statute. Some of the crimes included in the last edition have been deleted; most of the statutory crimes created since 1970 are included. The chart is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of all crimes under North Carolina law, but it should include the crimes that constitute most of any superior court's criminal docket.

The chart is current through the 1977 General Assembly. Some motor vehicle offenses are included, but one should see the Institute's publication entitled Punishments for Motor Vehicle Offenses for fuller treatment of this subject. Similarly, some offenses for which the punishment does not exceed $50 or 30 days are included, but a more exhaustive listing of these offenses can be found in the Institute's chart entitled Misdemeanors with Punishments Not Exceeding $50 Fine or 30 Days' Imprisonment. Both of these publications are available from the Institute of Government.

The holding in State v. Blackmon, 260 N.C. 352, 132 S.E.2d 880 (1963), complicated the preparation of this chart. It overruled prior cases and held that the phrase "fine or imprisonment in the State's prison, or both, in the discretion of the court" in a substantive criminal statute was not a specific punishment. Thus, G.S. 14-2, which provides the punishment for "any felony for which no specific punishment is presribed by statute," was invoked to limit the maximum imprisonment to ten years.¹ Problems raised by the application of Blackmon and later cases to the statutory provisions follow.

(1) Some felony statutes provide punishment of imprisonment and fine; others call for imprisonment or fine. The lack of a specific term of imprisonment necessitates reference to G.S. 14-2, which carries ten years of imprisonment or fine or both--giving the court three alternatives.² Whether reference to G.S. 14-2 for the limit on the length of imprisonment also requires that this section be respected in its provision for these three alternatives is not clear. The more reasonable conclusion seems to be to accept the term of imprisonment provided by G.S. 14-2 but follow the combination of punishments specified by the substantive statute. Hence, with regard to a statute imposing imprisonment and fine, the court would not, under this interpretation, have the alternatives

1. The statute provides: "Every person who shall be convicted of any felony for which no specific punishment is prescribed by statute shall be punishable by fine, by imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or by both, in the discretion of the court . . . " N.C. Gen. Stat. § 14-2.

2. The 1967 General Assembly added "or both" to G.S. 14-2, and thereby removed the difficulty that was formerly present because of the lack of this alternative. Most statutes provide for "fine or imprisonment or both in the discretion of the court" (emphasis added).

of either fine solely or imprisonment solely. Likewise, where the penalty is imprisonment or fine, the court could not do both. The chart incorporates this resolution of the problem. When the issue is involved, that fact is noted by an asterisk (*).

(2) The Blackmon holding has been extended to misdemeanors,³ necessitating reference to G.S. 14-3 when the substantive statute specifies no length as to term of imprisonment. G.S. 14-3(a) punishes misdemeanors for which no specific punishment is provided "by fine, by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or by both, in the discretion of the court."⁴ The impact of Blackmon on misdemeanors is in these areas:

(a) Reference to G.S. 14-3(b) subjects misdemeanors to the possibility of "escalation" to felonies. If a misdemeanor punishable under G.S. 14-3 is infamous, done in secrecy and malice, or done with deceit and intent to defraud, it becomes a felony punishable by up to ten year's imprisonment. The escalation clause likely will be interpreted conservatively to prevent wholesale creation of new felonies, but the possibility is real.

(b) A problem analagous to that discussed in (1) above arises in relation to misdemeanors. Many of the substantive misdemeanor statutes call for fine or imprisonment; G.S. 14-3 calls for fine or imprisonment or both. Again, the punishment is charted with the combination of punishments specified by the substantive statute. Here also the asterisk denotes the involvement of this issue.

(3) Another related application of Blackmon occurs when a statute prescribes a minimum but not a maximum punishment. In this situation the solution incorporated in the chart is to list the minimum punishment as set out in the statute and the maximum as set out in G.S. 14-2 or G.S. 14-3. Again, the asterisk is used to identify the existence of the issue.

A final question, which apparently has been resolved by the North Carolina Supreme Court, concerns the maximum permissible punishment for a misdemeanor that, under the statutes, is "punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court" and also is contained in an article of the General Statutes that limits punishment for violation of any section of the article unless "another penalty" is provided. The Supreme Court in State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535 (1970), in considering the maximum punishment permissible for violation of G.S. 20-174.1⁵ did not apply G.S. 20-176 (the general penalty limitation for Chapter 20,

3. State v. Adams, 266 N.C. 406, 146 S.E.2d 505 (1966)(dictum).

4. This language was added by the 1967 General Assembly, which deleted the former phrase "as misdemeanors at common law." Since the new language simply embodies what the courts had declared, there was no change in punishment of misdemeanors as a result of the 1967 act.

5. Subsequent to the commencement of the Spencer case the 1969 General Assembly rewrote G.S. 20-174.1.

Article 3) and stated "that an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court is a general misdemeanor for which an offender may be imprisoned for two years."⁶ This chart follows the Spencer holding for those Chapter 20 offenses in which the issue arises.

The crimes in this chart are set out in alphabetical order of major subject-matter headings. Cross-references have occasionally been used to help locate specific crimes under the proper major headings. The numbers listed under "Source" refer to chapter and section numbers of the General Statutes; "c.1." indicates common law.

An index to the crimes and punishments by subject matter heading appears on pages iv-vi. A Table of General Statutes that shows where a given statute may be found within the chart appears on pages vii-ix.

THE INSTITUTE OF GOVERNMENT, an integral part of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is devoted to training and research in the fields of state and local government.

Since 1931 the Institute has been conducting schools and short courses for city, county, and state officials. Through guidebooks, special bulletins, and a magazine, the research findings of the Institute are made available to thousands of other officials throughout the state.

The Legislative Service of the Institute records daily the activities of the North Carolina General Assembly while it is in session, both for members of the General Assembly and for other state and local officials who need to follow the course of legislative events.

Over the years the Institute has served as the research agency for many study commissions of the state and local governments.
