UNC
GOVERNMENT

The School of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill works to improve the lives of North Carolinians by engaging in practical scholarship that helps public officials and citizens understand and improve state and local government. Established in 1931 as the Institute of Government, the School provides educational, advisory, and research services for state and local governments. The School of Government is also home to a nationally ranked graduate program in public administration and specialized centers focused on information technology, environmental finance, and civic education for youth.

As the largest university-based local government training, advisory, and research organization in the United States, the School of Government offers up to 200 courses, seminars, and specialized conferences for more than 12,000 public officials each year. In addition, faculty members annually publish approximately fifty books, book chapters, bulletins, and other reference works related to state and local government. Each day that the General Assembly is in session, the School produces the Daily Bulletin, which reports on the day's activities for members of the legislature and others who need to follow the course of legislation.

Preface

This book updates and replaces William A. Campbell's seminal work, Property Tax Collection in North Carolina, the most recent edition of which was published more than a decade ago. Professor Campbell's enduring scholarship served as both a foundation and an inspiration for this book.

Several chapters included herein were previously published as School of Government Property Tax Bulletins. While those bulletins will remain available free of charge on the School of Government's website, their content has been updated and expanded for publication in book format. This book reflects all major legislative changes to the Machinery Act and related statutes through June 2011.

Acknowledgments

I am indebted to my School of Government faculty colleagues Shea Denning, Ken Joyner, and Kara Millonzi for generously sharing their tax and finance wisdom and for never losing their patience with my incessant questions. My friends at the North Carolina Department of Revenue's Local Government Division, especially David Baker and Lee Harris, were always available to discuss particularly knotty tax problems. Without their input, this book would have suffered greatly.

I also owe thanks to the hundreds of dedicated local government tax professionals across North Carolina with whom I have had the pleasure of working and from whom I have learned much over the past three years. I am continually impressed by the dedication of these local government officials to the property tax profession, in particular Valerie Curry, Neal Dixon, Lorie Domnas, Stan Duncan, Pat Goddard, Jo Roberson, David Reid, Pete Rodda, Kim Simpson, and the many other talented leaders of the North Carolina Tax Collectors Association and the North Carolina Assessing Officers Association.

Most importantly, I thank my wife, Lynn Leubuscher, for her love and friendship.
