

Popular Government

FALL 2004 • VOLUME 70, NUMBER 1

CHUCK LINDY / NEWS & OBSERVER

HARRY LYNCH / NEWS & OBSERVER

JOHN L. WHITE / NEWS & OBSERVER

ON THE COVER

President Bush's faith-based social services initiative raises issues about the separation of church and state.

Cover Article

4 Faith-Based Social Services: What Are They? Do They Work? Are They Legal? What's Happening in North Carolina?

John L. Saxon

In 2001, President George W. Bush promised “bold steps to rally America’s armies of compassion.” He then launched a faith-based initiative in social services. A School of Government faculty member specializing in social welfare law and policy examines that initiative.

Feature Article

16 Evolution of a Nonprofit, Part 1: Determining the Organization's Orientation

Margaret Henderson

Has your nonprofit become more accountable to one person than to the community that it was created to serve? Learn about the characteristics of a “person-centered” orientation and the steps your organization might take to change direction.

From the MPA Program

22 Public Construction Contracting: Choosing the Right Project-Delivery Method

Valerie Rose Riecke

The key to the success of a construction project may be the method by which it is organized and managed. An MPA student sought the opinions of construction industry experts on which of four common methods best meets typical goals.

32 Responsibility for Human Resource Management in North Carolina Municipalities: Findings and Recommendations

Kirsten Olson

How do North Carolina municipalities distribute responsibility for human resource management? A survey of medium-sized cities produced some interesting findings about which functions are typically decentralized, which typically centralized, and which typically shared.

Departments

2 NC Journal

Great Things Grow in Greene County • Consortium Receives Grant to Study Best Practices in Civic Education • School Publishes New Legal Guide on Pregnant Students

38 At the School

School Dedicates Knapp-Sanders Building • Weidemaier and Upshaw Join School Faculty