

Court Order to Disclose Confidential Information

Health Information—HIPAA Privacy Rule, 45 C.F.R 164.512(c)—A covered entity may disclose protected health information in response to an order of a court, provided that it discloses only the information expressly authorized by the order.

Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services—G.S. 122C-54(a)—A facility shall disclose confidential information if a court of competent jurisdiction issue an order compelling disclosure.

AIDS Virus Infection and Reportable Communicable Disease—G.S. 130A-143—Information shall not be released unless release is made pursuant to a subpoena or court order. Upon request of the person identified in the record, the record shall be reviewed in camera. In the trial, the trial judge may, during the taking of testimony concerning such information, exclude from the courtroom all persons except the officers of the court, the parties and those engaged in the trial of the case.

Treatment Relationships with Certain Professionals—G.S. 8-53 et. seq.—Any resident or presiding judge in the district . . . may . . . compel disclosure if in his opinion disclosure is necessary to a proper administration of justice. If the case is in district court the judge shall be a district court judge, and if the case is in superior court the judge shall be a superior court judge.

Flora v. Hamilton, 81 F.R.D 576 (M.D.N.C 1978). Judges should not hesitate where it appears to them that disclosure is necessary in order that the truth be known and justice done.

State v. Efird, 309 N.C. 802, 309 S.E.2d 228 (1983). The statute affords the trial judge wide discretion in determining what is necessary for the proper administration of justice.

Substance Abuse Treatment Records—42 C.F.R. § 2.64—the court may order disclosure only if the court finds that good cause exists. To make this determination, the court must find that:

1. Other ways of obtaining the information are not available or would not be effective, and
2. The public interest and need for disclosure outweigh the potential injury to the patient, the patient's-program relationship, and the program's ongoing treatment services.

Notice: the patient and person holding the records must be given

(a) adequate notice in a manner that will not disclose patient identifying information to other persons, and

(b) an opportunity to file a written response to the application or to appear in person for the limited purpose of providing evidence on the legal criteria for issuance of the court order.
